Hillel's Secret Diary

Thursday, October 1st

Today I overheard Dad telling Mom about "how it all began back in 1917" and let me tell you, I think this is the WORST origin story EVER. ItS LIKE LEARNING THAT THE WORLDs most evil ice-cream villain decided to erase all flavors. Except itS NOT ICE CREAM--ITs religion. Unfairness rating: 47 out of 10.

What I Heard Grown Ups Say

"AFTER THE COMMUNIST REVOLUTION... A RUTHLESS BATTLE TO ERADICATE RELIGION

My brain went POOF-- "eradicate" sounds like they want to press a giant delete key and POOF--no more mitzvahs!

Then Dad said there was this scary police called the NKVD--except that was just one name. These secret-police groups kept changing names like my cousin changing soccer teams. We Chassidim call them "DI OSIYOS"--Hebrew for "the three letters" (GPU, then NKVD, then KGB). Or "A KNEPL," which means "a button" (like the button on their uniform).

ME: "SO BASICALLY, THE BAD GUYS HAVE SUPER-POWER CODE NAMES AND BUTTONS?"

DAD (WHISPERING): "AND LOTS OF CELLARS AND SIBERIAN CAMPS."

ME: ...CAN WE GO BACK TO TALKING ABOUT CANDY?

Poison of the Masses?!

Then Mom said any parent who taught Jewish stuff was branded an "enemy of the state." They said Judaism was "poison of the masses."

POISON. OF. THE. MASSES.

If Judaism is poison, what does that make cold broccoli? Because I'd actually choose broccoli over poison.

The "Re Education" Orphan Houses

Worst of all, they'd snatch kids away to "re-educate" them in orphan homes. I tried to imagine an orphan camp: no toys, no parents, just terrifying guards teaching "no Hashem allowed." I nearly choked on my juice.

My Brilliant Scheme Not

- STEP 1: Build a secret fort under my bed.
- STEP 2: Hide my siddur (prayer book) and Megillah in a shoebox.
- STEP 3: Use the special knock-knock code to let the "Torah spies" in.

(Theory: If I become a secret agent, maybe the bad guys will think I don't exist.

	Genius.)
	Except Dad says: "We're not building forts today."
	Adults always ruin perfectly good plans.
	Why This Stinks for Me
	I can't brag to my friends that I know secret-police code names.
•	I'd rather be learning cool stuff in cheder than drawing blueprints for a tunnel.
•	I miss my hockey stick.
	But hey, at least I get to write this diary in SECRET, so I'm basically a super-secret spy too. If only I could get credit for that.
	UNFAIRNESS RATING FOR TODAY: 50 out of 10 (because if Bolsheviks had to wipe out religion, why didn't they at least leave a little candy behind?)

	Today was MISSION #1 in the War for Jewish Education: HIDE THE CHILDREN FROM T
	NEIGHBORS. Unfairness rating: 99 out of 10.

Morning Briefing

I woke up to Tatty whispering, "Remember, do not let anyone see you before registration is over." Registration is when the government sends teacher-spies door to door to ask, "Any children of school age here?" If they spot you playing ball or even peeking out the window, they snitch--and then your whole family gets in trouble.

Defensive Ops: Code Camouflage

Mommy gave us a refresher on our secret knock:

- Knock knock
- (Count to three in your head)
- Knock knock knock
- (Pause three seconds)
- Knock knock

If any visitor (like our melamed, Reb Mendel) uses that exact pattern, we know it's safe. Otherwise, we vanish faster than a popsicle on a hot day.

Then Mommy set up "Operation Giant Houseplant." She plopped a HUGE potted fern by the window. I tried hiding behind it, but my sneakers stuck out the bottom. Banana peel. Not exactly MISSION SUCCESS.

The Spy Teachers Arrive

At 10:15 AM, I saw Teacher #1 hoofing down our alley with her clipboard. My heart did a triple-somersault. She stopped at Mrs. Levin's door and chirped, "Good morning! Any children who should be in school here?"

I ducked behind the fern. Yankel dove under the table and squeaked when he hit his elbow. (Sorry, Yankel.)

Mrs. Levin mumbled, "Not that I know of," and slammed the door. I nearly fainted from relief.

Five minutes later, Teacher #2 strolled by our front gate. I tried my brilliant disguise: I wrapped our old tallit around me like a blanket and tiptoed behind Tatty's chair. But the fringe dragged on the floor and I tripped--CRASH! Mommy shot me "the look" and shoved me into the kitchen pantry.

Offensive Ops: Cheder at Home

While hide-and-seek was happening outside, we had to do our cheder lessons inside. I sat cross-legged on the rug. Mommy taught us the Parsha and new niggunim. Honestly, whispering Torah through the pantry door felt like being in a secret mission control. Kind of cool--silver lining.

F	Afternoon Debrief
	After lunch, Tatty peeked out the window. "Registration is done," he whispered. "You —(can breathe."
	I crept to the front gate and poked my head out. The street was empty! I hopped down
-	the steps like a king returning from exile.
	Kid Logic Schemes
_	I've been thinking up better hiding spots:
1	Hollow out a tree stump for a secret bunker.
	Build a pulley system to lower us through the basement hatch.
	Invent an invisibility cloak out of old curtains.
_]	Dad says, "LetS NOT START WORLD WAR III WITH THE NEIGHBORS." BUT III kee

	Silver Lining of the Day

-4	find me! I even beat Yankel oncethough he says I cheated because I hid in the oven. (That was a cooking mishap more than a cheat.)

Instead of looking like a clueless bald kid, I press my hand on my head and scratch "my scalp" until I sit down. Works every time--SCRATCH 'til seated, mission accomplished.

Vaccine Panic!

Today we had "back shots" with the school nurse. I knew there'd be a problem: tzitzis strings stick out like shoelace fireworks. If I took them off, everyone would spot my secret.

At the last second I lifted my shirt and tried to tuck the tzitzis under my shoulder --only three strings escaped, waving goodbye. The nurse, a nice Bucharian Jewess, leaned in and whispered (in Russian),

"GOOD BOY, ACHACHAMTCHIK (LITTLE RABBI)!"

I almost fainted -- and not just from the shot.

New Bathroom Disguise Routine

After my "little rabbi" moment, I decided:

Arrive at school wearing tzitzis + kippah.

Mission: Survive Cheder ... and Hunger

Today I learned that being good at hiding from school is great, but being good at hiding from my stomach is even harder. Unfairness rating: 73 out of 10-because I have to dodge drab public school AND pretend I'm not starving.

Covert Cheder Ops

Mommy and Tatty risked EVERYTHING to send me to an illegal cheder (Jewish school) in our apartment building. I felt like the worldS TINIEST SECRET AGENT. EVERY KNOCK ON THE DOOR MADE MY HEART DO BACKFLIPS--WHAT IF IT WASN+ Reb Mendel but NKVD spie

Enter R. Zushe "Der Shamash" Paz

My first cheder teacher was R. Zushe, known to us kids as "DER SHAMASH" (the attendant). He was short, with a big white beard that looked like a cloud on his chin. He didn't smack us with a leather strap--nope, he slapped us gently with his GARTEL (prayer belt).

ME: "OWW!"

R. ZUSHE: "PAY ATTENTION TO EVERY LETTER, HILLEL!"

He was TERRIFYING ... and AWESOME.

Bread Butter Breakthrough

After cheder, I'd slump down to the kitchen table, and there it was—tiny blobs of butter melting into the dark bread. In those famine days, it was like discovering buried treasure. My belly rumbled so loud I thought it might alert the neighbors, but that buttered bread was INSTANTLY revitalizing. Silver lining: I could almost forget I was living under Communism.

Mission: Move to the Secret Cellar Hideout Upgrade!

Unfairness rating: 12 out of 10-because now I have to learn Torah in a MANURE-FILLED DUNGEON.

Bentcha decided our cheder needed a stealthier location after too many near-misses with government goons. So we packed up our siddurim and slid down into the cellar of the Mishulovin house--aka the "ultimate underground hideaway."

Cellar Recon Report

- Smell: Eau de horse manure. Lovely.
- Floors: Covered in dust, garbage, and some mysterious straw.
- Windows: Two barred windows--one facing the gate (prime spy lookout) and one facing the street (easy escape hatch).
- · Bonus: Drafty breeze keeps us from sweating over the Gemara. Silver lining!

+	After heated hushed arguments (and me insisting I needed THAT siddur), they coughe
U	p the 300 rubles. I unwrapped my gift, eyes gleaminguntil Cousin Faiga flipped hrough its pages and sniffed,
	"FOR 300 RUBLES? I THOUGHT THERE'D BE PICTURES IN IT!"
1	nearly fainted. PICTURES?! In a siddur?!

	SKETCH-SWAP PLAN: Next time I'll offer to sketch pictures inside the siddurcreative value adds for free!
	WINTER-COAT BACK-UP: Maybe I'll wear the siddur as a hat so it doubles as a coat.
	Multi-purpose mitzvah!
	LOAN SHARK MOVE: I'll charge my friends 10 rubles each to peek at my new siddurpay yourself first!

I	overheard Tante Rosa mutter,
	"HE'LL FREEZE WITHOUT A COAT."
I	panickedwas I expected to practice Torah in snow? Then I realized she meant ου	tside, not in our cozy living room. Crisis averted.

S	ilver Lining

 My secret-agent Bar Mitzvah was epic (even if only eight people came).
 Now I can read my leining in REAL Arizal tunewithout worrying about pictures or
