My Secret Sch	ool Life in	Samarkand
---------------	-------------	-----------

Sunday: The Weirdest Rules Ever

Okay, so my name is Hillel and I'm going to tell you about when I was a kid in this place called Samarkand. It was basically the WEIRDEST time ever.

Get this - the government (those are the people who make the rules) decided that kids weren't allowed to learn about Yiddishkeit. Like, AT ALL. Can you imagine if someone told you that you couldn't learn Torah or keep mitzvos? That's just crazy, right?

But here's the thing - our parents didn't care about those dumb rules. They were like secret agents or something. Except instead of fighting bad guys, they were secretly teaching us Torah.

Monday: Mr. Daniel Tells Us Everything

DO This i	old guy named Daniel came over to our house oday. H	e looked pretty sad, like when you ccidenta	lly step on your little brother's toy and
eel reall	y bad about it.
1y tatt	y made him some tea (adults LOVE tea for ome reas	son) and then Daniel started talking.
"KIC	S," HE SAID, "I USED TO WORK FOR THE
GO\	/ERNMENT. I TOLD PARENTS TO SEND THEIR KIDS TO
THE	NEW SCHOOLS."
- was li	ke, "That doesn't sound so bad."
But ther	he explained the whole thing. The jovernme	ent totally TRICKED the parents! They said, Sure, p	ick your own teachers." But then they ecretly:	switched all the teachers with their own eople.	That's like if your mommy said you could oick wha	t's for dinner, but then she secretly eplaced	your fleishigs with treif. NOT COOL.

11 , ,2 D
,	niel told us about these supe
brave kids who would	n't eat the non-kosher food	at school. They just ken	pt their mouths shut tight.	No matter what. Those	kids were like tiny tzaddikin	n, if you ask me.
Daniel felt really bad	about all this stuff. I guess that's what ha	ppens when you realize you	were on the wrong team.
Tuesday Night: (Our Living Room Becom	nes Awesome
After Daniel left yes	sterday, my parents got th	is look. You know the lo	ook - like when parents are planning something a	and they think you don't no	tice.
But I TOTALLY no	oticed.
Tonight, things got	interesting.
First, Tatty closed a	II the curtains. Like, REAI	_LY
1 1 1
losed them.

	Then Mommy checked the hallway about a million times.
	I was thinking, "What is going ON here?"
	Then Tatty pulled out this really old sefer. It smelled like my zeidy's house - you know, that old sefer smell? And he whispered (WHISPERED.), "Tonight, we learn."
	And just like that, our boring living room turned into a SECRET CHEDER. How cool is that?
	Sometimes other kids would sneak over too. We had _	to be super quiet because if the neighbors found _	out, we'd be in BIG trouble. It was scary but also kind of exciting. Like being in a secret club, but for learning Torah.
	We learned alef-beis and stories about the Avos and niggunim. Mommy taught us melodies that her mother taught her, which her mother taught HER. It was

1	ite this chain of Viddisha mammas touching tids
١	ike this chain of Yiddishe mammes teaching kids
1	Forever and ever.
	Wednesday: The Scary Guy at the Shul
	There was only ONE shul left open in our whole c	ity. ONE! There used to be tons of them, but the ,	government closed them all down except this one.
	And there was this guy there named Chaim who gave
•	everyone the creeps.
,	Whenever visitors came, he'd run up to them super
4	ast and be like, "HI!IM CHAIM!IM IN CHARGE
!	HERE! EVERYTHING IS GREAT!
_	But here's the really scary part - my zeidy told me
+	the truth. Chaim was working for the government. He
١	wrote down the names of everyone who came to daven
٦	and gave the list to the police. That's why lots of
1	people stayed away - they knew Chaim would report

the	em and they'd lose their jobs. Or worse.
Ιt	was like having a spy right in the shul. A spy
wh	o pretended to be your friend but was actually
da	ngerous.
Bu	t you know what? The old people like my zeidy stil	I went. He said, "When you're my age, you stop beil	ng afraid of their threats and start caring
abo	out what really matters."
Ze	dy was pretty brave.
TI	nursday: Parent Power
Hei	re's something crazy - EVERY parent became a nel	amed. They HAD to, because there were no
yes	hivos allowed.
Мγ	tatty would come home super tired from work, but he'	still teach me for half an hour every day.
E٧	ERY. SINGLE. DAY. Even when he probably wanted to just rest!

"This is more import	ant than anything else," he'd say.
I didn't get it the	n, but I do now. It's like if learning Torah was	banned and your parents had to secretly teach you.	Oh wait, that's EXACTLY what happened!
Some families had se	cret melamdim visit. We all had to pretend we didn	t know about it. It was like this big secret every	one was in on, but nobody talked about.
The coolest part? T	here were actual SECRET
YESHIVOS. Like,	hidden yeshivos where kids could earn together. Pare	ents would whisper about where they were. It was	like something out of a story, except it was real li-	·e.

Mo	tzei Shabbos: What I Figured Out
So t	nere's what I learned from all this craziness:
•	Sometimes grown-ups make really dumb rules
•	Parents will do ANYTHING to give their kids a Torah
	education
•	Kids can be way braver than anyone thinks
•	Keeping mitzvos secret is better than not keeping them at all
Eve	ry time we lit Shabbos candles in secret, every we learned a new letter of the alef-beis, y time someone kept kosher even when it was / d - that was us winning. We were like quiet ers in Hashem's army, keeping Yiddishkeit
alive	, · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · ·
And	you know what the best part is? We DID IT. We kep	t learning, we kept our traditions, and we didr	it let anyone stop us.

Take that, weird government rules!
THE END
(Okay, not really the end, because there's way more to the story. But this is enough for now. My hand is tired from writing.)
