Hillel's Secret Diary

Thursday, October 1st

Today I overheard Dad telling Mom about "how it all began back in 1917" and let me tell you, I think this is the WORST origin story EVER. ItS LIKE LEARNING THAT THE WORLDs most evil ice-cream villain decided to erase all flavors. Except itS NOT ICE CREAM--ITs religion! Unfairness rating: 47 out of 10.

What I Heard Grown Ups Say

"AFTER THE COMMUNIST REVOLUTION... A RUTHLESS BATTLE TO ERADICATE RELIGION

My brain went POOF-- "eradicate" sounds like they want to press a giant delete key and POOF--no more mitzvahs!

Then Dad said there was this scary police called the NKVD--except that was just one name. These secret-police groups kept changing names like my cousin changing soccer teams. We Chassidim call them "DI OSIYOS"--Hebrew for "the three letters" (GPU, then NKVD, then KGB). Or "A KNEPL," which means "a button" (like the button on their uniform).

Me: "So basically, the bad guys have super-power code names AND buttons?" "

Da	d (WHISPERING): "And lots of cellars and Siberian camps." "
Me:	Can we go back to talking about candy?
Pois	son of the Masses?!
The	n Mom said any parent who taught Jewish stuff was branded an "enemy of the ta-	te." They said Judaism was "poison of the masses."

Nor	rst of all, they'd snatch kids away to "re-educate" them in orphan homes. I tried to	imagine an orphan camp: no toys, no parents, just terrifying guards teaching "no

NEIGHBORS.	Unfairness	rating:	99	out	of	10.

Morning Briefing

I woke up to Tatty whispering, "Remember, do not let anyone see you before registration is over." Registration is when the government sends teacher-spies door to door to ask, "Any children of school age here?" If they spot you playing ball or even peeking out the window, they snitch--and then your whole family gets in trouble.

Defensive Ops: Code Camouflage

Mommy gave us a refresher on our secret knock:

- Knock knock
- · (Count to three in your head)
- Knock knock knock
- (Pause three seconds)
- Knock knock

If any visitor (like our melamed, Reb Mendel) uses that exact pattern, we know it's safe. Otherwise, we vanish faster than a popsicle on a hot day.

Then Mommy set up "Operation Giant Houseplant." She plopped a HUGE potted fern by

Morning Maneuvers

I arrived at school thirty minutes early--too scared of classmates laughing at my "mystery boy" routine. I circled the playground like a lost puppy so everyone would think I live nearby. Sneaky, right?

Hat and Tzitzis Troubles

I wear my Uzbeki-style cap inside class to hide my kippah. But sometimes Ms. Karina (the teacher) commands:

"ZALTZMAN, REMOVE YOUR HAT!"

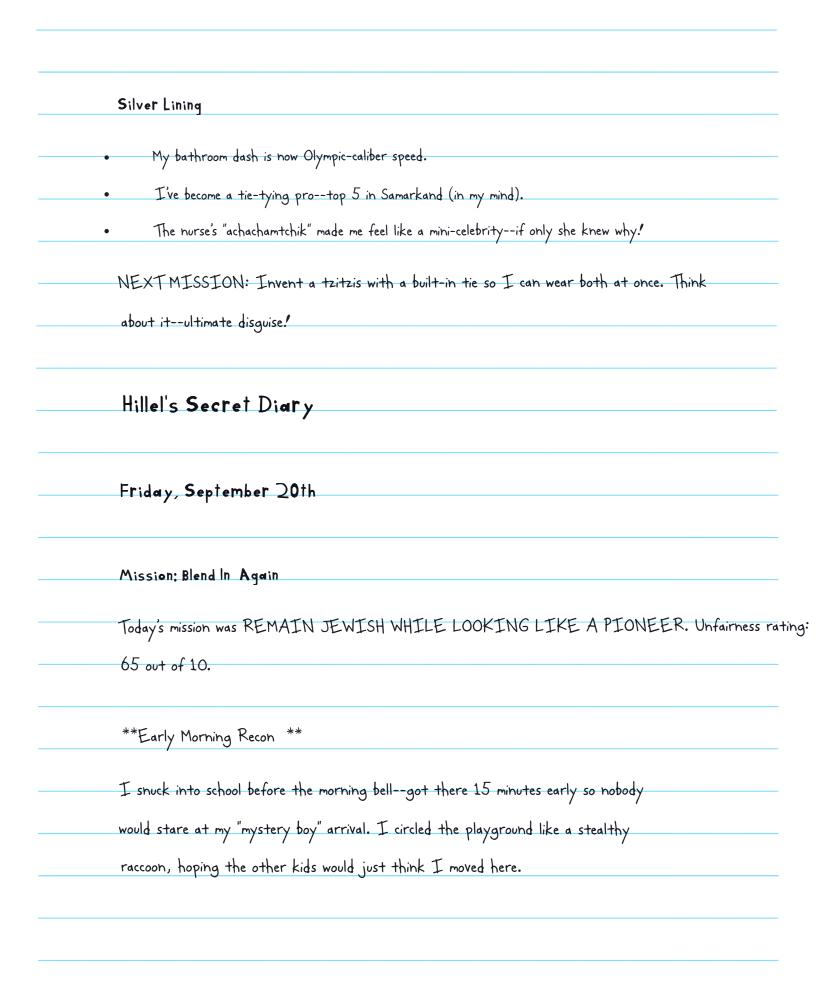

Instead of defying her, I press my hand on my head and pretend to scratch an itch. I keep scratching until I sit down-no bald kid here!

Under my shirt, I wear tzitzis--my secret mitzvah-fringe. They stick out like rebellious shoelaces.

Vaccine Panic!

Today a nurse marched in for our "back jab"--injections are supposed to go in the arm, but this time it's the back! My brain screamed: HOW DO I HIDE TZITZIS STRINGS FROM A NURSE?

Hiding in Cheder HQ

We learn in a tiny apartment right next to the courtyard gate. Bentcha sits by the window, staring down the lane like a hawk. Whenever he spots someone suspicious--KGB or mailman--he waves us out the back door in two seconds flat.

One day I wasn't quick enough. The door swung open, and I dove behind it like a ninja--only my sneakers stuck out. I stood there for five whole minutes (felt like five years) until Bentcha shooed the stranger away.

Barbed Wire Prisoner Pandemonium

That afternoon, giant construction fences went up around the yard. Turns out the new building was made by prisoner workers under armed guard. Barbed wire, watchtowers, rifles--this place looked more like a fortress than our cheder!

Then all heck broke loose: one prisoner bolted for freedom. Guards scrambled with rifles raised, shouting, "Stop him." Naturally, they stampeded through every nearby courtyard--including ours.

Mission: Host a Secret Bar Mitzvah
Unfairness rating: 47 out of 10because having a Bar Mitzvah in Stalin's favorite year of terror is both awesome and terrifying.

Undercover Celebration
Today was my Bar Mitzvahheld right here in Apartment 6, on Chudjumskaya Street (Toopik 1 means dead-end street #1). Nobody in their right mind was planning a party in 1952. Stalin might've been ready to ship all of us off to Siberia40,000 barracks for 3 million Jews! So only eight "trustworthy" guests showed up (in secret):
Uncle Boruch Duchman
Dovid Mishulovin
• Eliyahu Mishulovin
Moshe Nissilevich
Berke Chein (hiding from who-knows-what)
• Tatty
Berel (my brother)

Me (the Bar Mitzvah boy, obviously)

We squeezed onto the couch, sang the QUIETEST Chassidic melodies ever, and whispered the traditional discourse tune so nobody in the hallway would hear. Felt like a spy movie, except with more yarmulkes and less popcorn.

The Great Gift Debate

Next came the big question: WHAT DO YOU GET THE BAR MITZVAH BOY?

- Aunt Rosa: "Buy him a winter coat! It's FREEZING out there."
- Me: "I want a real siddur-- the Torah Ohr edition in Arizal rite."

There was only one copy in town, owned by Osher Shlaif. He wanted 300 RUBLES for it.

That's enough rubles to buy a whole sheep... or at least a gigantic loaf of challah.

After heated hushed arguments (and me insisting I needed THAT siddur), they coughed up the 300 rubles. I unwrapped my gift, eyes gleaming--until Cousin Faiga flipped through its pages and sniffed,

"FOR 300 RUBLES? I THOUGHT THERE'D BE PICTURES IN IT!" "
